

9 months ago

Happy to see the Regency era is becoming fashionable again. There will be less teasing about my "granny" style and more shopping options.

👍 36 🗨️ REPLY

▲ Hide 3 replies

9 months ago

OMG I love this - that "granny" style is SUPER in this year!! 😊 Everyone is going to be begging you for tips!!! 💕🌟🌟 If you haven't already, definitely check out my video...I dive DEEP into some of the delicious traditional looks that are going to be EVERYWHERE this year!! SO glad you enjoyed this video - thank you so much for supporting my channel!!! 🍷🍷🍷

👍 3 🗨️ REPLY

9 months ago (edited)

I have an idea of some of my "mistakes" and this highlighted some that I can more readily fix, such as bedroom bed/window cohesion and picture height. I loved those up/down shades in the roman shade look. I feel that buying the right size rug for the living room might necessitate I draw up the plan first and try to finalize what furniture is going to stay or go and what the final configuration will be. It is so tempting to run out and buy the newest this or that without doing the groundwork. Your positive attitude and guidance is very helpful and this video helped because it is helping me focus in on what needs to change.

👍 3 🗨️ REPLY

▲ Hide reply

9 months ago

I'm so glad this was helpful - there's nothing more frustrating than seeing your mistakes and not quite knowing how to tackle them!!! 💕🌟 If you're looking to draft up a floor plan, definitely check out my video on design tools and apps!! 🍷 I talk all about some of my favorite planning software - it'll make laying that groundwork a breeze!! 😊 Thank you SO much for leaving this super kind comment, and good luck with all of your planning!! 🍷💕

👍 🗨️ REPLY

9 months ago

Hi thank you for another great & fun video. When you mentioned "yelling to grandma" I was reminded again that one of the key things home designers seem to forget is to really consider FOR WHOM are the spaces being designed? I cannot tell you how often these days I get invited to a home where I literally cannot get down and up from ANY of their low-slung, arm-less or very low-armed furnishings. Fine when you're a healthy 30-something. NOT GOOD when you're a disabled person in her 60's. I stand around feeling lost and wishing I had not come. Even grabbing a dining-room chair for me won't work if the chair has no arms. If there are elders in your family, or persons with disabilities, ...

Read more

👍 41 🗨️ REPLY

▲ Hide 2 replies

9 months ago

This is SUCH an important point - I always say the most important part of design is making your home work for YOU, and for the people you share your space with!! 😊💕 What good is a trendy piece of furniture if no one can use it? 🍷 I totally agree with you here - putting your needs first is always a good call!!! 🍷💕 Thank you SO much for bringing this up, and thanks for joining me for another week of design fun!! 🍷💕

👍 11 🗨️ REPLY

10 months ago

I love this video and how you explained that transitional has subcategories. I love transitional styles. For my home it means clean lines but furniture and decor is made with classic materials such wood, leather, and nice fabrics. No metal or acrylic that would lean too modern and clash. Also, could you do a video explaining the difference between maximalist and organized clutter? I drives me crazy when rooms are filled up with stuff so you can't actually enjoy any of it.

👍 1 🗨️ REPLY

▲ Hide reply

10 months ago

🍷 I'm so glad I could do your favorite style justice!!! I LOVE the sound of your version of transitional - I'm allllll about those natural materials this year!! 💕🌟 I would LOVE to do a video on maximalist style - I'll totally add it to my list!! 🍷 In the meantime definitely check out my latest 2021 trends video - traditional maximalist styles are back in a big way! 😊💕 Thank you so much for this sweet video, and thank you for watching! Hope you're having a fabulous Valentines day!! 🍷

👍 🗨️ REPLY

9 months ago

This was very informative and, although I've never seen the show, you providing examples is always great. This style reminds me of the house I grew up in. It's a style that can easily be overdone, with rooms too "formal" to "live in ". I'm glad you emphasized watching your other videos to see how to incorporate this style, rather than people duplicating a film set. Ps = your curtsy from the shed was hilarious 😊

👍 11 🗨️ REPLY

▲ Hide reply

9 months ago

LOL thank you Could you tell I'd been practicing?? 😊💕 I absolutely love this comment - I always do my best to give you guys options to choose how to incorporate a style in the way that works best for you!! 😊💕 I know not everybody is ready to live in an ACTUAL regency style mansion!!! 😊💕 Thank you SO much for taking a bit of your Saturday to talk Regency Design with me, and thank you for this sweet comment!! 🍷💕

👍 7 🗨️ REPLY